SOCIAL WORKERS - MAKING A DIFFERENCE, EVERY DAY

Jagdeep Rakhara believes all children should have the same opportunities to participate in their neighbourhoods and communities.

Each day, the social worker, who supports children and youth with special needs and their families, works hard to ensure the best interests of the children she works with are always considered in decisions which affect them. No matter what challenges or opportunities Rakhara faces, her efforts - like those of thousands of social and front-line workers - always focus on improving and strengthening the lives of the children and families she comes into contact with.

March 7-13 is Social Work Week in British Columbia, a time to recognize and celebrate the vital role, commitment and dedication of social work practitioners in our hospitals, schools, mental health and treatment facilities, child and family programs, youth outreach, resource and counseling centres and on the front lines of the province's child protection system.

Social work practitioners touch the lives of thousands of British Columbia families. From direct services to children and youth, First Nations, seniors, people with physical or mental health concerns and disadvantaged members of our society to researching and developing policy, social work practitioners are integral in helping people overcome challenges and achieve their goals and aspirations.

Quotes: Mary Polak, Minister of Children and Family Development: "The expertise offered by social workers is essential to the creation of strong, healthy families supported, in turn, by inclusive and engaged communities. They help society's most vulnerable children, families and individuals through crises and troubled times. Social work practitioners really do make a difference - and they deserve our appreciation."

Kevin Krueger, Minister of Social Development: "Social work is demanding and requires sound judgement, competence, integrity and compassion. Our ministry staff work as a collaborative team with community social workers to assist vulnerable people, ensuring they get the supports and help that they need."

Jagdeep Rakhara, social worker: "I am a strong believer in supporting, educating and advocating for families who have children with special needs. Holding the hand of a family and watching them grow is such a rewarding experience. I love knowing that I can make a difference in other people's lives."

Quick Facts:

* The total number of Ministry of Children and Family Development front-line social workers in February 2011 was 2,248 - compared to 1,803 in 2005. * These social workers perform roles in mental health, child protection, adoption, residential home resource, probation, child and youth with special needs and multi-disciplinary functions. * Many more social work and front-line practitioners are graduates of other programs, including areas such as child and youth care, and MAs and PhDs in counseling and clinical psychology. * The current number of trained social workers working within Aboriginal Delegated Agencies has grown from 70 in 2006 to almost 315 at the end of 2010. * There are 12 social work degree programs offered by six public post-secondary institutions in B.C., seven bachelor of social work programs and five masters of social work. * Last year, more than 335 men and women graduated with a social work degree from B.C.'s public post-secondary institutions.

Howard Wayne French

July 1, 1938 - February 18, 2011

Howard Wayne French was born in Lethbridge Alberta, July 1, 1938. He was the second son born to Leonard William French and Barbara Dorothy Reid.

Wayne was predeceased by his parents and his brother Gordon.

Wayne grew up around the McGrath area of Alberta. At 15, Wayne's Mother moved to BC leaving him herding sheep for room and board. At 17, his buddy Bryan Crookston and Wayne decided to ride the freight trains going throughout southern Ontario and into the Buffalo area of New York.

Wayne looked back on that experience as some of the best times of his life.

Wayne returned to Alberta and drove truck delivering sugar beets and asphalt in southern Alberta.

He enlisted in the Air Force for 3 years and decided not to reenlist as he found it too regimented. Wayne moved to BC and worked on Vancouver Island for the Forest Service. There he met his first wife Fran and married on Oct 24, 1964. They had two daughters, Corrina born Feb 8, 1966 and Susan born May 27, 1968. They moved to the Chilliwack area where Wayne worked for Cattermole Timber running heavy equipment.

Wayne divorced and remained single until 1971, when he met Glenda and they married on Sept 2, 1972.

Wayne took on the role of stepfather to Kevin, and Leonard was born Dec 9, 1973 and Richard followed on April 11, 1975.

The family moved to Chetwynd in Aug 1975. Over the years he worked for various contractors and also worked on forest fires around the Chetwynd area.

Wayne looked forward to retiring at 65 enjoying his yard work and the garden. Retirement did not come easy as he was restless and bored and after a year and a half he went back to work part time. He finally retired permanently in 2009.

After his operation in January of 2010 his recovery was slow and he lacked energy.

He was diagnosed with cancer at the end of October 2010 and lost his battle on Feb 18, 2011.

Wayne loved his quiet talks with the grandchildren. He shared their fun times and took pride in their accomplishments. He often told Glenda that he was very proud of their children and grandchildren and it made him a content man. Life was good. He took and gave much enjoyment. Wayne enjoyed fishing, camping and gardening. One of his favorite things was to share a meal and play canasta with close friends. He lived his life simply and loved his wife of 39 years, their 5 children and 11 grandchildren.

Interment will be at a later date in Chilliwack, B.C.

Arrangements were entrusted to Bergeron Funeral Services & Crematorium Ltd

Sloths are medium-sized mammals that live in Central and South America. Sloths are omnivores. They may eat insects, small lizards and carrion, but their diet consists mostly of buds, tender shoots, and leaves. Leaves are their main food source, which provide very little energy or nutrition and do not digest easily: sloths have very large, specialized, slow-acting stomachs with multiple compartments in which symbiotic bacteria break down the tough leaves. The digestive process can take as long as a month or more to complete. Leaves provide little energy, and sloths deal with this by a range of economy measures: they have very low metabolic rates and maintain low body temperatures when active (30 to 34 degrees Celsius, and still lower temperatures when resting. Sloths mainly live in Cecropia trees.
