Chetwynd Equine Therapy Program building youth confidence, resiliency

Youth taking part in the Tansi Friendship Centre are getting a confidence boost, building peer support and friendships in a new equine therapy program hosted by the non-profit. More riding sessions are slated to start this month. Riding instructor and Youth Wellness Counsellor Bonnie Huhn says her students have been meeting biweekly since October, proud of the huge strides it's created for their mental health and self-esteem, noting it's really about giving youth a sense of pride and accomplishment. "It's pretty hard to engage a kid or a youth to talk to you in a room, regular conventional counselling isn't really a thing for them, or something that they really want to engage in, and even then it's difficult," she said. "So I created this program where I incorporate some western lessons in it, but the majority is mental health focused, we work on what isolation over the pandemic has done to the kids, identity issues, depression, anxiety, trauma, grief – whatever they're struggling with." The program is primarily aimed at local indigenous youth, says Huhn, but ultimately open to any kids in the Chetwynd area – 10 to 15 students can be accommodated at the local riding arena, where it all takes place. "Sometimes it can push kids out their comfort zone, but they get so much from it – boundaries, conflict resolution, and teamwork, stuff that they haven't really seen much of," she said. "So my focus really has been on indigenous kids, because they're the ones that lack those resources the most, and it's been a wonderful program."

A dog walks into a butcher shop and the butcher asks, "What do you want?" The dog points to steak in a glass case. "How many pounds?" The dog barks twice. "Anything else?" The dog points to some pork chops and barks four times. So the butcher wraps up a two-pound steak and four pork chops, and places the bag in the dog's mouth. He then takes money from a purse tied around the dog's neck, and sees him out. A customer, who has been watching in amazement, follows the dog to a house several blocks away, where it rings the doorbell to be let in. As the owner appears at the door, the customer says, "What a remarkable dog!" "Remarkable?" snorts the owner. "This is the second time this week he's forgotten his keys."
